other house, won't you?' He Was After Joseph.

I was over in the Pennsylvania depot the other day when a train came in bearing a young man who stood over 6 feet high and had arms as long as the pickets on a fence. He was making inquiries about the ferryboats when he spied a loudly dressed young fellow not far away whom anybody would have picked out as a traveling fakir. The giant from the country made three long steps and picked the fakir off his foet and slammed him down, and as he held him on the planks he said:

"Durn yer hide, but I thought I'd run across ye ag'in some day. How's the tooth powder swindle? How's sellin a man sunthin that's split every durned tooth in his mouth in tryin to clean 'em? I'm goin to make a cold corpse of ye in jest two minits!"

But the police were on hand to hand him off and insist that he go his way. The fakir had been roughly used and combin's get his breath for several minutes. When the big depot had got through whirling around with him, I asked if he had been in the tooth powder business, and he smiled in a sickly way as he replied:

"Inever was He takes me for my twin brother Joe, who goes about selling that stuff. It takes the enamel off, but Joe keeps right on selling it. Hang that hayseed—he almost killed me!"

"Do you think, young man, that you can give my daughter all she asks for?" questioned papa grimly.

"I—aw—think so, sir." murmured the lover bashfully. "She says she wants only me "—Tit-Bits. A Floral Detective of Long Ago.

In early times the Dutch farmers of the up river farms of New York had as the up river farms of New York had an ingenious way of recovering pocket knives that might have been dropped or mislaid while plowing or gardening was going on. Cutlery was not as cheap then and abundant as in these days; so the farmers took the thrifty precaution of keeping two or three sunflower seeds in their knife handles. Then if the knives fell upon broken ground and could not be readily found, the owners would wait until the seeds sprouted, and an isolated sunflower stalk or blossom in field or patch would signalize the possibility of a missing article's being at its root. True, the owner did not always realize the result of the scheme, because a passing boy who understood the token often "got there" before the planter.—New York Tribune.

We beg to draw the planters attention to this machine for which we claim the following advantages:

THE GRUSHER will cut the cane transversely in pieces about 3 inches long and extract about 50 per cent. of the juice and telever the crushed cane in a uniform layer to the 8 roller mills, thereby causing a perfect feed and increased extraction of juice.

THE CRUSHER will leave the "skin" on the cane, thereby giving the juice a better chance to be expelled than if the cane was ripped open subjecting the pulp to the hard packing on the returner bar of the 3 roller mill.

THE CRUSHER will save labor in handling of the cane, as an irregular distribution of cane on the carrier will not materially effect the regular and even feed to the 3 roller mill.

THE CRUSHER will not require additional steam or boiler power, as it has a ditional steam or boiler power, as it has a to the carbon of the parts.

THE CRUSHER will not require additional steam or boiler power, as it has a to the parts.
